Dedication

What a year! 1984, the year of George Orwell, presidential elections, the Olympics and Mr. Patuleia! How lucky can one class get?

In the true sense of the word, dedication means devoting a great deal of time and energy, both of which have been generously given to this year's senior class by Mr. Patuleia, our math teacher, our coach, but most importantly, our advisor and friend. A rare quality involving courage, strength, and understanding, dedication is found in a person whose caring attitude makes learning enjoyable, makes it appealing, yet still keeps it a learning experience.

We, the Class of 1984, wish to thank Mr. Patuleia for guiding us through the most important years of our lives, and for giving up his time on weekends, after school, and on holidays in order to make our class as successful as possible. At least in terms of our high school education, senior year marks the end of a long period of learning. We know, however, that learning is a never ending process full of surprises day after day. Mr. Patuleia, too, was always full of surprises and energy and, no matter how long the track was, together we ran the race. For his concern, his energy, and his desire to teach both in and outside the classroom, we the Class of 1984 dedicate this yearbook to Mr. Joseph Patuleia.

Change is eternal in high school; personalities change, depth of knowledge changes, attitudes change. This year, the yearbook, too, has been modified to reflect the current trends in annual publications. It all began in May of 1983 when we decided to take a formal senior class picture for the yearbook. Because it would be the first of its kind in color, the scene was decorated by a framework of brilliant balloons, a touch which has inspired the theme of this year's book, "Up, Up, and Away!"

As seniors, we have been growing over the past four years and, likewise the yearbook has improved. For 1984, the staff has made many changes. The first noticeable change is the name of the book. Since the first BHS publication in 1957, the yearbook had been titled Missile because of a Nike site in Bedford. As times have changed, this name seemed to become less meaningful and students decided it was time for a new name. Because Bedford is known for having the oldest flag in the country, Signum, which is Latin for flag, was chosen.

The entire format of the book has been changed from its traditional format to a more updated and exciting one. The book begins with a sixteen page COLOR opening. BHS has not used color since 1979, but this year due to many new fundraisers, we are able to afford this new section. After the opening there is a section called The People which includes seniors, superlatives, the directory, and underclassmen who now have individual pictures. The next section combines several of the traditional sections into one; it is called Student Life and includes events, activities, and surveys. Following this is the Sports section which precedes Academics. Academics includes not only faculty pictures, but also interesting insights into each department of BHS. The 1984 yearbook ends with the Advertising section which has been expanded to include an index listing the pages on which every student is pictured and the pages of each subsection.

To add to format change, the staff tried to keep several things in mind. First, the yearbook needed more copy . . . more written words. When looking back twenty years from now, the names that are so clear to each of us now might be a little hazy then. We tried to caption all pictures and add many feature articles which are meant to be both humorous and interesting. Also the staff tried to be careful with graphic designs. We attempted to use lines, sequential section dividers, and other graphic effects to enliven the book.

Most importantly, the fact that a central theme was used ties the book together. We decided on Up, Up & Away because not only did we have a senior class picture decorated with balloons but also we have moved up through the high school . . . Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors . . . and finally Seniors. As our last year closes, it is time for us to go away but we will never forget our times at BHS . . . the friends made, laughter shared, and troubles overcome, all of which have been imprinted in our minds to be remembered fondly.

We, the yearbook staff, hope that our attempts have made Signum the best BHS yearbook ever.

Our little town

A small town incorporated in 1729, Bedford as a community played an important part in the American Revolutionary War. Well known to most residents, the oldest flag in the country and the only flag flown at the battle at Concord Bridge is the Bedford Flag, now housed in the public library.

After the war, the citizens began work in establishing schools and town government, the offices of which haven't been changed since the first town meeting. The Union School was built in 1891 with only 8 grades, though the first class of Bedford High School graduated from the Town Hall in 1886. From 1900 on, high school students went to other towns until 1955 when our own B.H.S. was built.

After WWII, with the growth of Hanscom Air Force Base, the population rose. The base, which started construction funded by the Federal Government in 1941, houses the Air Force headquarters for the Electronic Systems Division.

The community of Bedford has always been a close one, with everyone helping each other. Through the efforts of volunteers many traditions are still maintained for the enjoyment of others—traditions such as the Bedford Santa Program, the Strawberry Festival, and the annual Bedford Day Celebrations.

Now, over 254 years since it's incorporation, the population of Bedford is 13,000. The town is a center of the technological revolution with hundreds of businesses and industries, situated next to Rt. 128, "America's Technology Highway". With all the employees of the industries, the population of Bedford doubles during the daytime.

Despite all the technological progress taking place in Bedford, however, this town typifies the beauty of a small New England community, the atmosphere of which shall always be remembered when we reflect back on our high school years.

Those Special Friendships

Harvest

Early in spring we took to the fields,
Walking together in our season of friendship,
As we carried between us the unplanted seed.

Yet, gazing into each other's eyes,
We glimpsed the richness of honesty in which we chose to lay the unblossomed beginning.

Together we have watched, tended,

Nurtured with time
And carefully mended with bits of simple conversation.

And, oh, our tiny seed has bloomed to greet the rays of joyous light shining in reflection of our mutual delight.

And even the tears we sadly shed have served to water the drying smiles and restore the green of the blossom's bed.

Oh, blessed harvest of growing love nourish still our every need.

All we had to do, my friend, was find the time to plant the seed.

In the corridors of Bedford High School, friendship is in perpetual motion. Friends speak in the language of friends everywhere; a smile, a toss of the head, a touch on the shoulder in passing communicate the feelings of sharing. When we failed a test there was always someone to moan companionably with us. Likewise, success was even more exciting when there was a friend to soar with us.

Developing friendships at BHS is made easier through its many clubs and extracurricular activities. Whether it be in the math league, on the football team, or working on the Tournament of Plays there is always a chance to make a friend. Often it is just this friendship that turns the activity into a truly worthwhile experience.

From day to day it is our friends who put up with our shortcomings and at the same time inspire us to be our very best. Friends are the greatest people with whom to share the good times, for joy is more than doubled when there is another pair of eyes to shine and another voice to shout and sing along.

When memories of failed exams, broken dates, and late mornings have faded with the passing years — it will be the friendships we have made which will last long after we leave this place. The people who laughed and joked with us, the people who were always there for us, the people who grew with us, these our friends will never be forgotten.

"Oh my God! What am I going to wear tomorrow? I need help!"

In New York and Paris, designers crank out the newest fashions for the 80's. Everything from imitating Chinese styles to tafetta, glitter, and a return to the basics are what's "in" now. Girls are once again looking like girls, boys are looking like boys. People now care more about how they look, and how they present themselves through what they wear.

There are also many fashions geared towards teenagers. These include preppy, valley girl, and this summer's hottest new style, flashdance! Anything can affect what we wear — movies, music, books, other people. What you wear is the best indicator of how you feel about yourself. That's why clothes are so important.

In Bedford there are many different styles. There is an undisputed rule, however, that jeans are the staple of every person's wardrobe. Girls and boys alike wear jeans — usually Levi's — but freshmen can wear designer, some once a week, others everyday. There is no set rule on how to dress in Bedford, but for those of you who still need some fashion tips here are the general guidelines.

At Bedford High School there are basically four different styles of dress: jock, casual, prep, and classy.

First there is the jock. If you want to dress like a jock, you must own a pair of turf shoes. These can be worn with anything, including your Levi's, (tight), rugby shirts, Nike or Adidas shirts, hooded sweatshirts, and athletic pants.

The casual style emphasizes old Levi's, work boots, and worn t-shirts. But most importantly, the casual dresser must wear long johns with a flannel shirt over it.

The prep who walks down the halls wearing plaid pants, argyle sweaters, and penny loafers (but never together — they don't match!). The preps stay together, all wearing their new Levi's and docksiders. Everything they wear matches, so if you don't have an eye for color, stay away.

Finally, there is the classy dresser. The students in this group are usually girls, but there are a few guys too. These girls have their own kind of style, wearing skirts, or pants with heels. You notice them when they walk down the halls, for they are the ones with the expensive clothes and an air of authority. If you don't have a lot of money, avoid this style. It runs into megabucks. The easiest thing to do is to develop your own style. Wear what suits you best, and you've got it made!

"Truly" a Night to Remember

On Friday, May 13, 1983, blaring radios and take-outs from McDonald's sustained many hard-working Juniors during hours of decorating as they transformed the gym for the 1983 Junior Prom, "Truly". The excitement increased throughout the day as streamers were raised and tables were set for the occasion. Their diligent efforts were not in vain.

After days of continuous rain, the class of 1984 was overjoyed at the timely appearances of sun and warm breezes on prom day. In fact, the weather was just perfect for all those parents who just couldn't take enough pictures of their children as they were leaving for dinner. Many popular spots for dining enjoyed by Junior Prom couples included The Wayside Inn, The Colonial Hilton, Alphonso's, and, of course, Cory's of Lexington. Unfortunately, the beautiful weather failed to sustain through the evening, halting many plans for hitting the beach on Sunday, but for the prom itself the day couldn't have been nicer.

Once inside the gym, couples were surprised by its spectacular transformation. Alternating red and blue streamers created the perfect romantic atmosphere beneath the dim lights, while the hand-built illuminated fountain highlighted the scenery and served as a wonderful background for taking pictures between dances. The band "Fantasy" played throughout the evening and later chose the King and Queen as well as their court from a group of finalists. Crowned as King and Queen were Scott Filleul and Maureen Bench, who were attended by Leslie McLaughlin, Janine McLaughlin, Tricia Burns, Kim Colliton, Chris Birch, Greg Moll, Jim DeVellis, and Ken Ginder.

Show some spirit!

Although students at BHS are usually full of energy and school pride, one week each fall is set aside for everyone to show just how spirited we can be. Preceding the homecoming football game, Spirit Week is the time for students as classes and as individuals to show their super-spirit. The week began with a traditional favorite, Clash Day, a wonderful, bizarre occasion, for the halls were teeming with loud colors, as well as unique combinations of stripes, plaids, dots, and mis-matched socks. This craziness was then carried over for Punk Day — the first of its kind at BHS — as the school was faced with an epidemic of green-hair-itis. Chains slung around waists, as well as safety pins worn through both clothes and ears added to the freaky atmosphere, while miniskirts and leather pants brought the streets of New York City right home to our suburban New England. The display of school spirit continued on Thursday with Costume Day when ghosts and witches prowled the halls in search of poor, uncostumed souls to torment.

Friday marked the climax of Spirit Week as the students donned our school colors for Blue and White Day. This was also the day when the class halls were transformed in the exciting Annual Hall Decorating Contest. For the second year in a row the class of 1984 dominated with their Haunted Hall; while the juniors placed a close second for their interpretation of Heaven and Hell. Honorable Mentions were awarded to the freshman Fifties Hall, as well as the sophomores for their version of Heaven and Hell. Each class put in tremendous effort for this successful activity. Closing the week was the Pep Rally, the chance for the student body to all gather as a whole and cheer on the athletic achievements of BHS. The marching band roused the crowd as they "showed their Superband Stuff" while the majorettes and Cheerleaders performed classy routines. All in all, the week was not only exciting and fun, but most definitely full of SPRIT!

Homecoming!

Despite the Buccaneer's loss to Newton South on Saturday October 22, Homecoming Day was a spectacular event. Adding to the intensity of the occasion, brisk air enlivened the grandstand crowds as they gathered to see not only the game, but especially the crowning of the 1984 Homecoming Queen. Glancing around, old friendly faces smiled as graduates were joyfully reunited with classmates and friends, giving the day an extra touch of autumn magic.

Following the first half of the game and an outstanding performance by the BHS Superband, the royal-red convertible rounded the track carrying the five finalists for Homecoming Queen. Reacting to the cheers from the crowds, the girls smiled and waved, trying to conceal their excitement and anxious anticipation. In keeping with school tradition, the finalists were met at the end of the ride by their proud fathers who escorted them onto the football field. Leslie Jelalian, Amy Birmingham, Kim Colliton, and Sandy Richards were announced as members of the court and presented with flowers, while Joyce Hennrikus was crowned the 1984 Homecoming Queen. The celebration continued on in the evening at the Homecoming Dance which marked the end of a beautiful, successful, and memorable Homecoming Day.

In Memory Eric Miller

August 1966 — November 1983

Eric

You were a gift from God.
While you were with us, you laughed . . . we laughed.
While you were with us, you cried . . . we cried.
You were so strong, we came to you for strength.
You were so brave, we looked to you for courage.
I guess it's so long for now,
Although we never really said hello.
You were on borrowed time, as we all are,
But I promise you this,
When our days come
We will meet again.

By
Alicia Whitney

To my friends and fellow classmates of the Class of '84:

I wish to thank you for always being great friends in the ten years since I moved here. Over the past two years, especially, through all my weakness and illness, you've given me so much support and strength to keep going on.

Eric Miller

In Memory Timothy Frimpter

September 1965 — November 1983

Tim . . .
Deep within our hearts,
are the memories of yesterday, and although they're sometimes hidden they never fade away.

There are so many treasured times,
that we all have shared with you,
and each of us holds a silent thought,
we smile at, looking back as we do.

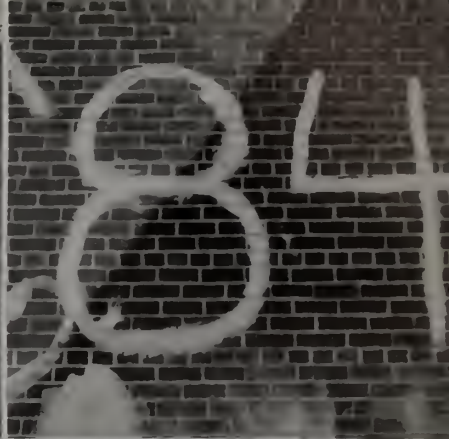

We can still hear the echos,
of you in our minds,
and can still feel the warmth,
of your smile as it shined.

But
We can't save time in a bottle, and words can't make wishes come true,
yet if we could, we'd save everyday,
so we all could spend them with you.

Our thoughts are still with you, Tim,
as they always have been,
In the memories of yesterday,
Always,
within.

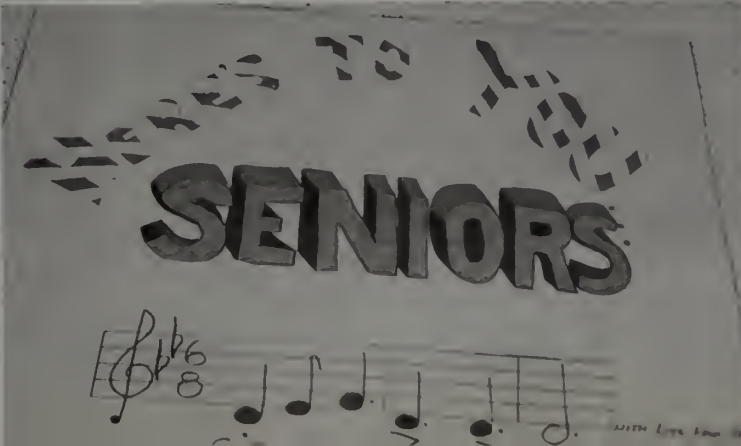

. . .from all your friends.

Although the people pictured on the next two pages were chosen because of their outstanding features or abilities, every student at Bedford High is superlative in his or her own way. Each year, one of the long anticipated traditions of the Senior class is to vote for the people they believe to have superlative qualities. A few of the categories that are voted on are: Most Talkative, Best Legs, and Most Dramatic. Winners of the superlatives are chosen by ballots distributed among the senior class. The votes are then tallied, and the winners announced.

- 1 — Captivatingly Cosmopolitan: Nancy Preston & Rich Aldridge
- 2 — Outrageously Radical: Jim Wattle & Pam Duggan
- 3 — Best Artist: Ann Marie Leonard & Peter Farrell
- 4 — Amazingly Athletic: Mug Inor & Greg Moll

Valedictorian

Man inhabits the earth along with thousands of other species, and yet he is the only species plagued by the endless drive both to prove himself to others and, more importantly, to himself. He needs to know that in some way he is good, preferably better than someone else.

Knowing that he could not achieve what he values and what satisfies him casts the human beings into despair; discovering that his dissatisfaction is his own fault, a result of his own sloth, dooms the unfortunate man to an equally black frustration. His most recent failure, the one that clings most obstinately to his mind over shadowing any past successes, nags him with questions of his own worth or, better said, his own worthlessness.

The fate of the fraud, who knows that his work is insipid while allowing others to believe that he has produced something of true value, is worse. Not only must he deal with his inadequacy, but he confronts a great fear. Will the others discover his fraudulence? And while he nervously agonizes shirking detection, his conscience demands that he tell the world that it is mistaken in honoring him for a valuable achievement.

On the other hand, the human being who finds his work successful basks in a happy smugness when considering his achievements. His conscience does not reproach him, and he must worry only whether his next endeavor will also result satisfactorily.

Thus, doubtlessly, this last specimen of mankind is better off than the others. He is happy and content because he has made an effort in one field and succeeded.

There you are, a freshman walking down the hall, minding your own business, and trying to make a good impression. You look up at all the upperclassmen walking by and it seems like all of them are looking down their noses at you. Even the people who are shorter than you seem to be looking down at you! You feel really self-conscious, as if you shouldn't be there. You feel like jumping into one of the lockers to hide.

When you get to your classroom, it's forgotten for awhile until you have to change classes again. Then you get out into the halls and start looking around at all the unfamiliar faces, and everybody turns their noses up at you once more. They don't want to have anything to do with a freshman. (Are you kidding? Low-life freshmen? No way! They won't even talk to you!)

Later when you're going up the stairs, a friend calls you from behind. As you turn to see who it is, someone else decides to trip you. You stumble over their feet and fall flat on your face. You try to get up quickly so that no one will notice, but of course your books go falling all over the place. While you're trying to recover all of your books and papers, everyone is stepping on them and saying things like "What a coordinated freshman," or "I should have known it was a freshman," or "That's so typically freshman!" It becomes very embarrassing.

Also, if you're ever lost, don't even think of asking an upperclassman for directions. First, he or she will act like just talking to you is a big favor. Secondly, do you seriously think anybody would tell a freshman the truth when it comes to directions?

Another thing you have to put up with is upperclassman when they do talk to you. They usually start off by saying something like, "You should feel very privileged, I'm actually going to lower myself to talk to a freshman. Don't tell anyone, though I wouldn't want it to get around. Oh, I hope no-one sees me!" Come on! That almost makes you feel worse than being completely ignored. It makes you want to say, "Thanks, I love you too."

But actually, it's not all that bad. After the first few weeks people lighten up and forget about Freshmen completely. Really — the people here at B.H.S. are pretty nice. Once you get to know more people you begin to fit in better and don't mind being a freshman anymore.

Remember when you were in Junior High and you wanted to get into High School so badly? You just knew that once you were in that building, all your troubles would disappear. But then you were a Freshman, a nobody to anyone except yourselves, the class of '86. Well, now you've made it, you are no longer underclassmen, you are Sophomores. But what's so great about being a Sophomore?

Probably the worst thing about being a Sophomore is that you can't drive. You can't even get your learner's permit. So how do you get to the mall or the movies or anywhere? Your parents drive you — how embarrassing! Nobody wants to go anywhere if their parents are driving them. How uncool! There are, of course, three ways to solve your mobility problems: turn 16½ very quickly, befriend a Junior or Senior who has his license and a car, or if all else fails, don't go anywhere until you can drive. This is extreme but you do have an image to maintain.

Another awful thing about being a sophomore is that, unlike the upperclassmen, you have no semi-formals or proms (no matter, you have no way of getting there anyway!) Don't you wish you could get all dressed up and dance the night away with your date? (Mind you, finding a suitable date is an entirely different problem.) There is a little romance to life when you are a sophomore. But if you wait for just one year you could have . . .

Junior/Senior privileges! There are you trapped forever in a stuffy classroom with an old, probably senile teacher quieting you every time you open your mouth. (Don't they understand you need freedom of expression?). If this isn't prison, what is? Who studies in study hall? Nobody. (Why would you want to do that?) Oh, to be free, roaming the halls, disturbing classes, going uptown! All this, too, can be yours when you are . . .

An upperclassman! All sophomores have what is commonly known as an identity complex. You aren't underclassmen and you certainly aren't upperclassmen. You're more the middleclassmen, the awkward stage, a transition into the upper echelon. Just two more years and you can join the few, the proud, the Seniors.

Everything may look bleak, but it really isn't that bad. What's so great about being a sophomore? Simple. You're not a freshman anymore!!!

You are driving out of the parking lot of the Registry of Motor Vehicles. Finally, you have reached the epitome of teenagehood. You are now a legal driver in the state of Massachusetts. What a feeling of power! As you drive home, you think about the experiences you have had in the process of getting where you are now.

Can you forget the first time you put your foot on the accelerator? Although your father was reminding you (for the 100'th time) about being a defensive driver and about paying attention to everything around you, you were only listening to the engine climb as it changed gears. You couldn't believe that you were actually controlling the car. Then there was the time you had an accident in the Driver's Education car! (But maybe we'd better forget that part!)

You've been driving for a month now and you believe you know everything about driving — except that the roads are slippery when it rains and that brakes lock if you "slam" them too hard. The expression of shock on the other driver's face is quickly recalled to your memory as well as the look of panic on your observer's face as she climbed off the floor back onto her seat!

Remember the time you accidentally ran the stop sign you never saw? Unfortunately your father did see it! Your heart skipped a beat when your father yelled "stop!" That's a stop sign!" As you slammed on the brakes, your father was hitting the floor with a brake that didn't exist. Then came the "Being a Responsible Driver" lecture. Your father yelled at you for not paying attention to the roadway, and also any little mishap which had happened since the last lecture came out into the open. Ten minutes and four cut corners later, you were once again driving.

Then came D-(driving)-day. As you walked into the room of the Registry with your palms sweating and your knees shaking, you tried to remember all the last minute tips from your friends. You then got into the car to perform the tasks required of you. Finally, after what seemed like years, you arrived back at the Registry, with doubt in your mind as you waited anxiously for the officer to start filling out the pink slip. With the worst part of the Junior year finally behind you, now you can drive!

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT

BEDFORD, MASSACHUSETTS 01730
(617) 275-7566

November 14, 1983

Congratulations, Seniors! Your graduation from Bedford High School signifies a number of academic accomplishments as well as the beginning of a new phase in your lives. This new beginning is built on dreams, aspirations, and ambition. Pursuing your dreams will be challenging, exciting and involve some risks. There will be many pressures from us, the middle-aged, for you to give up on your ideals and accept more practical solutions to the world's problems.

Keep your eyes fixed on the best. If we are ever to approach our potential as human beings, it will be because of the dreams, aspirations and ambition of our young people

Best wishes,

SUB'S NOTES:

A Period — Sociology II

The students continued the experiment they said they started yesterday on Social Isolation. Most pupils just rested their heads on their desks for the entire period. I think they were sleeping. (This class is not very ingenious).

B Period — Advanced Psychology

The class explained to me the day after a test they always watch a television program and then analyze it in an essay. Everyone decided on cartoons, The Road Runner Show specifically. They plan to write on the mental state of Wile E. Coyote due to the hardships he endures.

C Period — U.S. History

The class finished their work early, so they played 7-up for the rest of the period. The girl with pigtails and glasses in the front row was kind enough to remind me of the homework assignment. However, many students complained about the topic of the paper. They said they were not "into" communist subversion in the Third World Countries.

D Period — Psychology

Your assignment book is apparently wrong. The class insisted their work for today was to watch and discuss the contestants on the Price Is Right, not to read the excerpt on criminal morality in Tolstoy's War and Peace. However, I did get a positive reaction when we decided to discuss Freud's Psychosexual Stages of Development.

E Period — No Class

F Period — Sociology I

The film "Sexual Behavior" was evidently enjoyed. An intensive discussion followed. These pupils are very knowledgeable.

G Period — Political Science

Absolute Zoo!! Three students have no maturity whatsoever. I have preserved a couple of their flying creatures for your viewing.

Utter Euphoria! The feeling you get when the face behind the desk is unfamiliar. Instantly, there is relief as last night's forgotten homework can be forgotten. Next period's cannot, however, so before the bell rings you ask permission to return to your locker. With permission granted (what else?), you eventually reach your locker via the longest possible route. On the way, should you happen to see a late classmate, it is your unwritten duty to tell them there's a sub in for Mrs. What's-her-Name.

Once back in class, you discover half the class has exchanged names and even a few additional students such as Art. E. Choke, Dina Myte, and Al Kahall have just enrolled. The sub then attempts to take roll, but the desks seemed to have scattered themselves all over the classroom. (Must have happened in the previous class — they were freshman — for paper airplanes were also all over the floor!)

When it came time to collect the homework the room becomes a sea of puzzled faces. Gaping mouths exclaim, "What homework?!" You explain to the sub that she must be mistaken, that the work plan must be wrong. "Yesterday was a test and today is supposed to be a recovery day!" While she searches through the desk for some note about what should be scheduled for the day, those friends you had seen in the hall enter the room. Each, of course, has his own excuse — "I was taking a massive English test, I will go get you the pass if you want, but the teacher has a class now and . . ." "I got locked in the typing room and the janitor just let me out. I can go find him if you want, but it will probably take the whole period . . ." "I had to use the bathroom REAL bad! Ask Susie Jones, she was in there too." Of course, a couple have notes "signed" by teachers explaining why they were detained. All these excuses are hardly heard, however, over the chatter and screams of a class let loose.

At the height of all this madness a bell is barely audible, yet apparently all ears heard, and there is a mad rush for the door. Had this been a timed fire drill, the record would have surely been smashed. One last obligation for the more mischievous student — if he should meet a fellow classmate, he warns, "You'd better have your homework done, Mrs. What's-Her-Name is in a WICKED bad mood. She's grading homework and it counts 10% of our quarter grade. Have a nice day!"

Ms. Blackwell takes time out from a busy day to demonstrate her warm smile.

One of the school's most popular teachers, Ms. Blackwell, is one of twelve children raised in Lowell. After graduating from Lowell High School, she attended Boston State College and later the University of Lowell, before coming to Bedford High in 1981 to teach underclassmen English. Today she resides in Concord and has a son James, seven, whose artwork can always be seen hanging on the walls of room A-12.

An avid runner, Ms. Blackwell, often trains with the boys' cross country team and is, in fact, their assistant coach. Along with her fifty miles of running per week, Ms. Blackwell is especially helpful to the younger members of the team. Her generosity and zeal are appreciated by all who know her, both as a competitive runner and as someone who bakes cookies for the track team.

Most importantly, Ms. Blackwell is always willing to go out of her way to help a student. She can be counted on to lend an ear to anyone who has a problem or just wants a friendly chat. Dedicated to teaching, Ms. Blackwell will push a student to do his best, and she shares in the accomplishments of her classes. It is this personal attention and enthusiasm that make Ms. Blackwell an excellent teacher.

Mr. Corliss is always willing to work with every student until he understands the lesson.

Mr. Corliss, born in Newton, Ma., lived his first seventeen years of life in Wellesley, Ma. He graduated from Salem State College with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Business Education. Straight out of college in 1965, Mr. Corliss began teaching at Bedford High School. In 1966, he was married to Mrs. Corliss and moved to Danvers, Ma., and between 1967 and 1970 he finished two more years of college at night school at Salem State where he received his masters degree. He also had his first three children in those three years. In 1976 he had another child and in 1980 one more was added to the family.

Mr. Corliss has spent the last 19 years with us here at B.H.S. and has also, in those years, spent 10 years at Middlesex Community College teaching. He has taught stenography, accounting, and typing. As he says "the years have flown by — there have been ups and downs but all and all it must have been good to go by so fast!"

From the students' point of view he is a teacher to respect. He greets the class with a smile everyday and remains friendly throughout the whole period. He is always "more" than willing to give extra help to anyone who even looks questionable and will not go on to anything new until everyone understands. His technique of teaching is to teach what your homework is going to be about in class and then the next day go over it and answer any and all questions. That in itself is a rare quality!

All and all we can honestly say Mr. Corliss is a definite "asset" to our school!

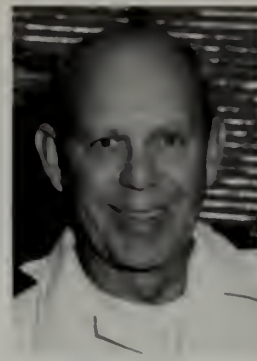

When asked the question, What do you think of Mr. Corliss? Many students responses were "Oh, he's a wicked cool guy and probably the best teacher in this school."

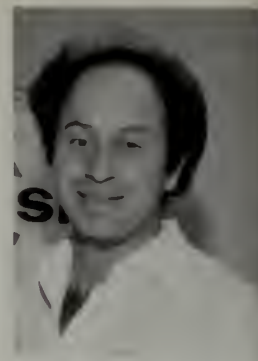

It takes a special breed of teacher to make history interesting and Mr. Spinosa is one of these instructors.

Social Studies is a two year requirement at BHS. As freshmen, we all take "Civil" and then U.S. History as a sophomore or junior. Mr. Spinosa is one of the teachers who makes this requirement worthwhile for the students. He treats freshmen as "young adults" rather than "teenagers" and introduces them to a higher standard of achievement. By the end of a year of note-taking, these freshmen are much more mature. Even if they forget the "watershed" dates, the fall of the Holy Roman Empire, or the Nihilists, the students will have learned from Mr. Spinosa how to act like high school students instead of Middle Schoolers.

It takes a special breed of teacher to make history interesting and Mr. Spinosa is one of these instructors. With his insights to the "scope and sequence" of WWI or the personality of Amilio Aquinaldo, Mr. Spinosa makes dead history come alive. Modern European History is his specialty. Although we take notes galore, (not remembering from one day to the next what the EMS Dispatch was) at least we will remember some of the "causes, course and effect" of WWII, even if it only be whose side we were on.

In addition to his enthusiastic teaching, Mr. Spinosa is also Program Administrator of the Social Studies Department. This year he has also functioned as a vice principal for Mr. Melanson.

Besides teaching, Mr. Spinosa is involved with several student, extracurricular activities. As an advisor to the citizenship committee, he helps the members with their activities which include choosing a Citizen of the Month and running school elections. Moreover, Mr. Spinosa is also an advisor to the Student Advisory Committee which works closely with the School Committee. His participation shows he cares about the students. Overall, Mr. Spinosa is an enthusiastic and interesting teacher as well as a great person.

Mr. Toland . . . Isn't this class ever going to settle down?

1. Marsha Clements, Kathy Walsh, Mrs. Robinson ... Actually it is very simple ... 2. Mr. Greenway, Amy Miller ... So you don't like your schedule? 3. Mr. Toland ... I'll make the Boston Pops yet! 4. Mr. Toland 5. Mr. Ullman ... Think PHYSICALLY!

After thirty successful years as a teacher, twenty-seven of which have been spent here in Bedford, William Toland will be leaving the Bedford schools this June. Since nineteen fifty-seven, Mr. Toland has been the band director at the high school, devoting a tremendous amount of time and care to students involved in the instrumental music program.

Mr. Toland's musical interests were sparked when he was a young boy playing the piano first, and then the drums. In the sixth grade he joined his high school's marching band for whom he played until his graduation. In continuation of his musical activities, he then participated in college marching band for four years and shortly after that, he formed the Bedford High School Marching Band.

After twenty-seven years, Mr. Toland remarks that, although many fashions have come and gone, the people here have not changed. His desire to teach at Bedford High School for so many years is a result of what he calls "good chemistry, nice kids and academically, the consistency and breadth of the music program." In his eyes, the music department has been successful for students and for him because it has always managed to meet the educational needs of those involved.

Mr. Toland's post-teaching plans will expand upon much of his work in the high school — writing and arranging music, doing research in the Humanities, and of course, part time teaching. Although he feels that Bedford High School has been very good to him, he believes it is time to move on and explore new opportunities.

Mr. Toland knows he will miss his teaching at B.H.S., and we will always be grateful for this teacher who gave to us so much of himself.

If there were superlatives for the faculty, our Athletic Trainer and part-time substitute Pete Cacciola would be a likely candidate for "definitely dedicated." He substitutes three days a week and will fill in one or two classes the other two days when the need occurs. He attends as many athletic events as humanly possible, and when two are going on simultaneously he remains available for both but stays nearest the one with the higher risk of potential injury to its players. When not substituting he is found in his office, working on insurance forms. His pet project is the weight training club, yet he always seems to be there when students with injuries need advice, a whirlpool, or a special exercise program. His average day begins at 7:15 A.M., and will continue until all practices or events are completed — which on many occasions could be 8 or 9 P.M. He puts in over 50 hours a week — minimum. Regardless of the situation, he is always his calm reassuring self. He is well respected by teachers and administrators alike as a substitute. He follows the teacher's plan to the letter and then some, always giving the class a meaningful purpose. Obviously, he is a well-rounded, devoted, needed member of the faculty. — Thanks Mr. C!

ACADEMICS

Shakespeare in the Rough

As a new year comes, to BHS, so does a new class enter the world of senior English. And with that comes the drama read by millions of seniors all over the world — Hamlet. We, as seniors, spend hours upon hours analyzing themes, understanding the "prose", and taking multiple essay tests. It seems only just that since good Ol' Willy causes us agitation, we return the favor. We decided to put Hamlet thru a modern day transition. The following is what we feel would happen should the play be incorporated into daytime TV:

In previous episodes we saw the imprisonment of Hamlet Rex because of illegal business transactions. As a result of this, he was impeached as chairman of the Chase-Manhattan Bank, and his brother, Claudius, was elected to take his place. Then Gertrude Rex divorced Hamlet and in a whirlwind romance married her brother-in-law. This infuriated her son Hamlet Jr. who returned from college to witness and inform his father of the incestuous romance. While at the prison the son learned that his father was framed by Claudius. Hamlet Sr. asked his son to clear the family name and destroy his uncle, but he also asked that he leave his mother alone. Weeks passed as Claudius fixed himself solidly in the bank, and Hamlet returned to college. Then, without warning, Hamlet Sr. was found dead in his cell, the victim of a cellmate stabbing. That was where we left off.

And now for today's show:
Today opens with Laertes Chancellor introducing his sister Ophelia on how to deal with her high-school sweetheart, Hamlet. He advises Ophelia to never see Hamlet again. Then Laertes leaves for Paris. Meanwhile Polonius Chancellor hires Reynaldo to spy on his son to insure that the family name stays honorable. Back to Gertrude. She is having a psychiatrist analyze Hamlet to find out what his problem is. The final diagnosis is love-sickness and most everyone is satisfied with that. In the bank, a member of the board, Norman Fortinbras, is secretly scheming to ruin Claudius, who supported the firing of Norm's father. Claudius, however, discovers this and succeeds in channeling Fortinbras' ambitions elsewhere. Now, Hamlet is arranging for his friend, Horatio, to entice Claudius into an illegal business deal. Horatio succeeds in getting the chairman to accept a bribe and even hears him brag about how he managed to get the charges of embezzlement and mismanagement-of-funds to be pinned on Hamlet Sr. He then explains how Claudius also hired an inmate to kill Hamlet Sr. for a small sum. With proof of his stepfather's guilt, Hamlet Jr. approaches his mother with these facts, but on the way, he discovers a burglar attempting to break into the family mansion. (Without thinking), Hamlet shoots but unfortunately the "thief" turns out to be none other than Polonius. Ophelia, already disheartened by being forbidden to see Hamlet, becomes hopelessly distraught over the forthcoming death of her father. Laertes returns from Paris and demands to see Hamlet. A duel is set up and at the start it is announced that Ophelia has just died in a car accident. Gertrude becomes distressed and is given one of Hamlet's tranquilizers which is actually a cyanide capsule that Claudius placed in the bottle and intended for Hamlet. The two men pace off and both are shot. Before he dies however, Hamlet manages to shoot Claudius, and tells Horatio to secure the election of Fortinbras as chairman of the bank.

Tune in for our next episode as we find out the answer to these questions: Will Norman Fortinbras become the new chairman of Chase-Manhattan? Will the love of Ophelia and Hamlet endure even after death? Will Gertrude return to Hamlet or stay loyal to Claudius in purgatory? Will God be able to handle this entire mess? What will happen to the show with all the characters dead?

Mathematics — that unavoidable, eternal, problematic subject for every high school student! You'd think after a few years you'd get the hang of it, but no sooner do you learn how to manipulate numbers — how to multiply, divide, even how to take a few square roots now and then — than they decide that the alphabet works better than simple digits. Enter Algebra! The unassuming student then faces months of factoring, (will we ever remember the quadratic formula?) rationalizing denominators, and the dreaded imaginary numbers — which brings us to an interesting point — We spend weeks learning rules and formulas applying to numbers that don't even exist. Be real! (ha, ha!)

At least a triangle is always a triangle. In fact, we all learned to prove that fact through theorem after corollary after postulate in Geometry. A few translation, rotations, and bisected angles later, it's off to Analysis and Advanced Math & Trigonometry. It is here that students discover what the sin, cos, and tan buttons mean on their calculators! In addition, functions are explored in depth, along with sequences, series, absolute values, and inductive proofs. (It takes an ingenious mind to make a false statement and show it's really wrong!) Then a select few masochists venture into the realm of Calculus. (Newton, we'll never forgive you!) With this course comes the "understanding" of limits, epsilons, and integrals. Not to mention the derivatives of functions. 'Low-d-high, less high-d-low!' If this stuff sounds foreign to you (as it still does to many of us in the class) just think of what lies waiting for you in the next few years!

Not only do the students make Chemistry class interesting; the teachers add excitement as well. When one walks into class and the teacher announces that the lab you are about to do is a Quantitative Approach to Chemical Equilibrium, he knows right then he's in trouble. The teacher starts giving background information on the lab and no one understands her even though she's speaking English. What usually happens in class, is that when one tries to pay attention, one becomes more lost towards the end than at the beginning of class. (Science teachers seem to be in a constant race, always telling the students they have to reach so-and-so a point by June.)

Now that everyone is a basket case and is trying to understand what significance chemical equilibrium will have on their lives, the teacher sends them off to their lab desks. Lab days in chemistry are always so much fun. They bring out the true personalities of classmates, from the geniuses and procrastinators to the ever so popular klutzes.

There is always a four-eyed Herman in class. He's the kid that got the 10,000 piece chemistry set for Christmas and has already done the experiment at home the night before. He also is the one who reminds the teacher that the class had homework. He has even found a mistake in Einstein's theory of relativity. (He knows about all this of course because he reads Encyclopedia Britannica every night.)

Procrastinators can be found everywhere, and a science class is no different. These people start to work on the lab at 12:15. (The class ends at 12:19.) When the bell rings, signaling the end of class, they run around from person to person, asking for the data they never quite finished obtaining. The unjust aspect of this, is that the procrastinators usually get a better grade on the lab than the people they took the data from.

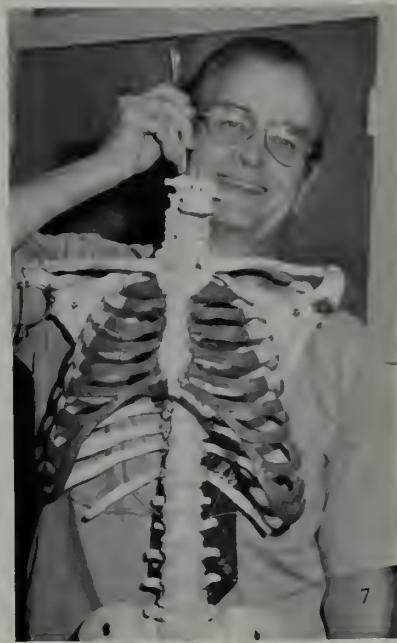

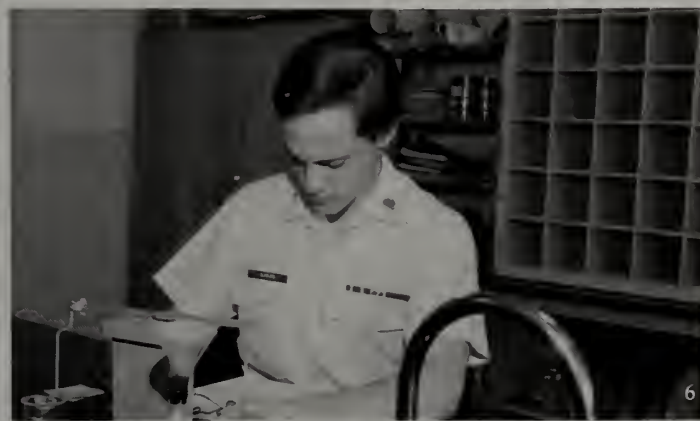

But more frequently found in a chemistry class is the klutzes. These are the people who drop beakers and test tubes, or accidentally pour the solutions they need down the drain. Acid is spilled on all the books and thermometers burst because they were put too close to the Bunsen burners. It is evident that many of these people are in the class, because at the end of class, broken equipment is piled in the trash can.

The day the lab is due, everyone is frantically writing gibberish for the conclusion. All one has to do, is say the experiment agreed with the proposition within range of error and then ramble as to why it agreed. To most, chemistry is like outer space — infinite and intangible. But none should fret, by the time he or she gets chemistry cleaned out of his or her mind during summer vacation, it's time for the Ullman Zone and the Wonderful World of Physics.

Studying Socially

"Well, Suzanne, it's like I told you — the only way you're going to get him is to show him you exist. Look at Kathy Loftus. She hung all over Kevin McCord at the Homecoming Dance! And now they're going out!"

"But Jen you know me. I just can't go up to a guy and start talking to him. I get all queasy and nervous and feel like such a fool. Anyway, if he did like me wouldn't he know I exist?"

"Oh, grow up Suzie! Guys these days don't know what they want. You have to show them everything. How can a guy get to know you or even like you if he never sees hide nor hair of you. You've got to — What was that Mr. Keegan? What happened on Dec. 7, 1941? Well ... wasn't that the day that the Constitution was signed? No? But I did read last night's assignment. Yes, I do recall the name Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Oh! I thought that's where all those ancient presidents like Benjamin Franklin and Benedict Arnold took their vacations. Yes, I do understand now, Mr. Keegan.

"Really Suzie, it's like he thinks I didn't read the chapter or something!"

"Did you?"

"Of course, but after the first few paragraphs it got really boring, so I went and washed my hair."

"Really Jen. Don't you have any self-esteem? You need good grades to get into college."

"College? Ph, pooh! I'll probably be married by then. Anyway, it's like they say, if you have money there is a college for everyone!"

"But what if you don't get married? You'll have to get a degree, find a job, support yourself, then ..."

"Suzanne Smith!"

Yes, Mr. Keegan? What happened in 1066? I believe that was the Battle of Hastings, sir."

"Yes, that's right, but please pay more attention."

"Sometimes, Suze, you really make me ill! You're such a brain!"

"I can't help it, I was born this way!"

"If I could only be so lucky. Oh, did you see GH yesterday? Luke and Laura left the show. I thought I was going to die! And Grant and Celia ..."

"Well, there's the bell. I'll see you at lunch, Suze. I swear, History is soooo boring. I don't know why we have to take it; we never learn anything in here!"

Bonjour!

Saturday, May 7, 1983

Dear Diary:

After waiting for over an hour for the bus, we finally set off for Quebec. My long awaited vacation was finally here!

However my excitement turned to disappointment, when we entered into Canada — it started to rain. We finally made it to our hotel after a seven hour bus ride and left to stroll the wet streets of Quebec City. We came back and for dinner ate at a French restaurant where we could have either chicken or beef and chocolate fondue for dessert.

After dinner, we went to the movies and saw "Silence, My Love," an English film dubbed into French.

Sunday, May 8, 1983

Dear Diary:

I woke up this morning, looked out the window, and saw pouring rain. Everyone got together and walked to a small restaurant for breakfast, where we were given our own dining room. Even though our group was the only one there, and we had a predetermined meal, the service was a little slow because the waitress could understand neither our sloppy French nor our English, and we could not understand this rapid French.

Despite the rain, we set off to see the historic sites of Quebec. We went to Cartier Brebeuf Park where we saw the boat of Quebec's founder, Jacques Cartier. We then went to the zoo, where we were all over taken by the cutest little bear who was shivering in the cold rain. Next, we went inside the monkey house. Everywhere we turned there were monkeys; I never knew so many different kinds of monkeys existed! We started getting hungry, so we stopped at none other than McDonald's.

Even in Quebec we had to "hang out" at Mac's for awhile! Then we went to the Montmorency Waterfalls. The spray and wind were so violent some of us got pushed back by them. We all ended up drenched so we went back to the hotel to dry off. We were then given free time until dinner to stroll around the hotel, to shop, buy souvenirs, meet French-Canadians and whatever else. For dinner we had crepes. Our evening activity was bowling.

Monday, May 9, 1983

Dear Diary:

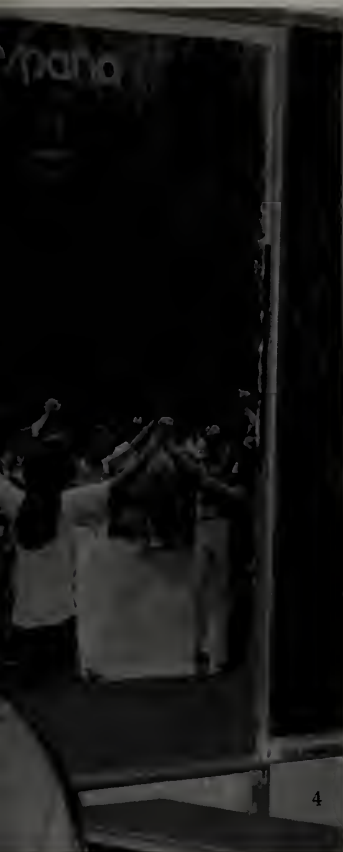

It is still raining! We ate breakfast at the same place as yesterday and were given a list of things to find in upper and lower Quebec City. The best thing of the hunt was going on a glass tram. Unfortunately, it was much too cold and we just had to go back to the hotel instead of finishing the search. When everyone returned and thawed out a bit, we got back on the bus for more touring. We went to the aquarium. Then we went to the top of an office building to take pictures of Quebec's skyline. Next we had lunch in a mall similar to Quincy Market. Afterwards the teachers gave us free time to find our way back to the hotel. Dinner tonight was in an old Quebec farmhouse. Before dinner we had stopped off at St. Anne de Beaupres' church, which is known for healing the crippled. After dinner our "fun" activity was held at the Roulanteque, a Canadian rollerskating rink.

Let's Get Physical!

"Hi, Mary. I was just thinking about high school the other day and I thought I'd call a couple of my old friends and reminisce awhile. It's funny how we both turned out to be Phys Ed majors. Remember gym in high school? Boy, what a difference from college!"

"Oh, do you remember that creep who use to whip the ball at everyone in dodge ball? I ended up marrying him! He always had to be the best at everything: do the most push-ups, score the most baskets, and kick the most goals. Now he's the vice-president of Digital. It looks as if our son, Johnny, is going to follow in his father's footsteps. We always get notes from school saying Johnny pulls all the girls' hair and pushes them off the gymnastics equipment."

"My little Susie's the same. She skipped gym the other day, thinking the teacher wouldn't notice she had left, but she did get caught. And what does she do? She asks me to write her a note saying she was temporarily ill that period so she wouldn't get a zero. Can you believe it?"

"Well we did that, too. Remember the time we went to Dunkin Donuts and came back and got caught by Miss G as we were sneaking in?"

"That was your fault! You're the one who had to go to the bathroom."

"Oh, remember the time we got divided up into teams for volleyball and we were stuck with the people we hated the most? That was crazy — everyone just sat around glaring at each other."

"Was that the same time when Judy broke the $400 window?"

"Yea, after it had bounced off Jack's face. He seemed to get the brunt of everything. He always got kicked in the shins during indoor soccer and got the high stick in floor hockey."

"Don't forget when he was hit in the head by Laura when we played tennis."

"But she ended up with a tennis ball in her mouth about five minutes later. I guess you could say justice was 'served'."

"Ooh, bad joke. You'll never guess who I saw the other day. Mr. Cacciola! He's a grandfather now! I used to hate the heart rate tests he used to make us do. They were such a joke. The gym teacher could tell though who wasn't doing anything — their heartbeat was normal!"

"Well, I hate to rush but I have to go pick up Johnny from baseball practice. He's the starting pitcher. We'll have to talk again soon. This time let's not wait such a long time."

"Okay. Take care. And don't let your gym students get away with what we weren't allowed to get away with. Bye!"

DaVinci vs. The Stones

Walk down to halls between classes and look inside some of the lockers. What's this? Someone has built a shrine of David Bowie. And here are some pictures of Duran Duran, Michael Jackson, and the Rolling Stones. Teenagers are known for listening to music all the time, in their rooms, in the shower, in school. It all started with Disco, KISS, and Shaun Cassidy. We liked that? Who would believe it?

Since then, the music we listen to has changed considerably. Synthesizers have taken music from hard rock to an adventurous, extremely dancable new sound. Groups such as Culture Club, Men at Work, and the Eurythmics have become overnight successes in the techno-pop industry, and older, more famous groups such as the Police and the Rolling Stones have had to accommodate this trend, not by changing their style of music, but by changing their image. So with this new style of music came a new way to present it, music videos, and a not-so-new method, concerts.

MTV started it all. MTV is a 24-hours-a-day music video station. Now every current group has produced videos that people want to see. Videos are not just television, they are an art form. Michael Jackson's videos are especially popular. He combines authenticity, using real gang members in his "Beat It" video, with incredible dancing and songs. Each artist tries to make his own style apparent through his music videos, just as he does through his music. And everyone has a favorite video, or at least one they like.

Concerts are the older, but very popular way to listen and see your favorite groups live. Some of the biggest tours have been by the more established groups such as the J. Geils Band, The Who, The Rolling Stones, and David Bowie. All of these concerts were big sellers, heavily advertised, and worth every minute of what you paid to see them. The best way to preserve the memory of your first concert and all the ones after that are concert T-shirts that just about everyone owns and everybody wears.

So stay up late and watch your favorite videos, go to concerts, listen to the music that you want to listen to. Everyone has a favorite group. Turn on your stereo, put on the earphones and turn it up real loud. Just one question. Can you crank Shaun Cassidy?

Working Toward Tomorrow

The Industrial Arts Department includes courses in wood shop, home ec., metal shop, technical drawing, auto shop, and electronics. The classes are designed to teach students the fundamentals of various trades. Through hands-on experience, students are shown their capabilities in making a block of wood into what they wish. The projects are of their own design and students are encouraged to take them home. In all, students are better prepared to handle difficulties later in life because of these courses.

Our Future is in Their Hands

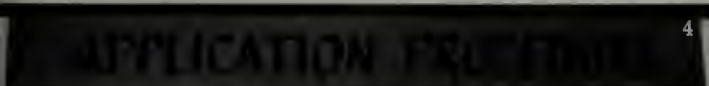

The time is May. The place is a college fair. Your fifth of the year to be exact. You're a senior and your parents insist they will find a school for you out of the hundreds represented. You've also been to a couple of career fairs and decided that you do not want to be a nutritionist or newspaper reporter. All throughout high school, you have been pounded with suggestions and ideas as to which college to attend or what career field to pursue that you really haven't had time to think what YOU want. (And when you do think about everything, you don't know what you want.) Life seems too confusing. You think you'll just wait until next week and go see your counselor to ask what you should do.

Well, next week is now June. You're sitting in front of the school computer, entering the data you're looking for in a college, and getting a printout of fifty institutions from places like Simon's Rock and Sweetwater State College, but you want to go to a college in the Real World, so you sit all through June procrastinating writing letters to the institutions. Then one day your mother won't let you go to the pool until they are written. You type up the letters and mail them to the fifteen schools that appealed to you the most. The first feelings of relief occur.

Then around July and August replies start coming in. You open the big manila envelopes, flip through the catalogs, and throw the whole kaboodle on your bedroom floor. Before you know it, September is here and your parents keep asking you if you've made any decisions yet. This is what starts you seriously looking through each institution's information. Those applications with more than one essay are aside for the time being. The others you start filling out. Between conferences with your counselor and discussions with your parents you manage to narrow your choices down to three or four. And if one college appeals to you more than any other, you must decide if you want to apply early decision. Decisions. Decisions. The pressures seem too much for one person to have to endure.

Well, December rolls around and everything but the essays are filled out on the applications of which must be mailed by Jan. 1. By the time Christmas break arrives, your English teacher is a basket case, having edited and re-edited all your less than adequate essays. You are sick of essays, so you go skiing for a week. On Dec. 30 you stay up until three in the morning typing all of your essays into the applications. The next morning Federal Express becomes that much richer because of your patronage. Anxiety is over; worry takes over. Now you have to wait until April to see if you've been accepted anywhere. Then it's back to decisions, decisions, decisions.

SPORTS

A Rebuilding Year

The 1983 Bedford football team posted a deceiving 1-8-1 record. This record does not measure the spirit, the enthusiasm, and the intensity which the team displayed throughout the season. This team earned respect from their teammates because they refused to give in. This attitude was evident by the daily improvement of the team and it's members.

The football coaches feel that the 1983 season has laid the cornerstone for future success. This attitude is so important in maintaining and assuring success in our football program. More important, however, is that the attitude, the loyalty, and the effort habits developed in each player through competition will make each player more confident and aware of what it takes to become successful. We feel that this team has learned their lessons well and that they are a credit to themselves, their family and Bedford High School.

Remember: "Success is failure turned inside out."

A Good Effort

The girls' soccer team ended their season this year with a record of 4-9-1. Although this was not a winning year, it was a marked improvement over last years record. Everyone worked hard all year, and it showed. Most of the games were very close and particularly memorable was the Lincoln-Sudbury game, which was lost in the last minute of play. Bedford had the smallest team in the league, fielding only 15 players, one of whom was injured for the entire season. This meant that people had to play regardless of injuries. This is where real dedication came in.

However, even though it was a hard year, everyone managed to have a great time! Bedford also placed two players, co-captains, Kerry Latina and Jan Hamann, on the DCL All Star team. Hamann also was placed on the first team of the Lowell Sun All Stars, while Latina received an Honorable Mention. Additionally, the Bob Gillis Memorial Award went to Jan Hamann, and Kerry Latina received the 12th player Award. Although the team will be graduating 7 seniors, there are also some excellent underclassmen who will hold up the team next year.

The 1983 boys' Varsity Soccer team had an outstanding year, finishing with a 9-3-5 record. The Bucs made the quarterfinals of the North playoffs before losing to the number one undefeated seed. Overall, Bedford finished third in the DCL behind Lincoln-Sudbury and Acton-Boxboro, respectively. Not many leagues in the state have three teams who qualified for the state tournament, and not many leagues have two of the three teams in the regional finals; this illustrated how tough the DCL was this year. Bedford's defense was the story this year; they were led by senior co-captain T.J. Cardoza and junior Rob Kelnhofer. In 17 games, opponents could only put 10 goals by the defense. Junior goalie Jim Storer had an excellent year, only letting nine balls by him for an outstanding 0.53 goals against average. The offense was led by junior co-captain Sean Hurley, and sophomores Neil Amidon and Mark Alcaide. Bedford scored 39 goals, breaking their old record of most goals scored in a single season. Five players from Bedford made the 1983 DCL All-Star team. T.J. Cardoza, Sean Hurley, and Neil Amidon made the first team, while Jim Storer, and Mark Alcaide made the second team. Next year should be an exciting year for Bedford; they will have a total of 16 returning players, 8 of them to the starting lineup.

Give It Your Best Shot!

The girls' field hockey team ended their season with a record of 3-9-2. This does not reflect the hard work and dedication of each player on the team. The team ended up tied for fourth place in a league with eight teams. Highlights of the season included the Acton game, in which Bedford became the only team to score on Acton in the regular season. Dual County League All Stars included Meg Isnor, Maureen Bench, Christine McGovern and Janine McLaughlin. The Lowell Sun All Stars were Maureen Bench and Meg Isnor. Janine McLaughlin scored the most goals and Meg Isnor had the most assists. Goalie Mary Beth Conway also put in an outstanding effort by saving 106 shots on goal. The team has many experienced varsity players returning next year, and this should definitely prove to be a deciding factor in the success of the team next year.

This year's soccer/hockey cheerleading squad helped support and add spirit to both their teams. The girls, led by tri-captains Carla Picariello, Michelle Eaton and Kim Colliton, along with the help of their coach Mrs. Gullage, cheered the boys' soccer team into the state championships. All in all the girls discovered new friends, and enjoyed themselves in both practices and at games.

Rah, RAH, Rah!

There was a great deal of spirit in this years football/basketball cheerleading squad. The girls worked hard to support their teams and lead them on to victory. After attending camp in the summer, they were prepared for the events that followed, especially the pep rallies and the Thanksgiving bonfire. Altogether, this squad had two fun and successful seasons. The captain this year was Courtenay Hand, and the coach was Miss "G".

If you look back in the 1983 yearbook you will find that this was supposed to be a rebuilding year for the boys' cross country team. The harriers ended the season at 5-3, indicating that hard work and dedication does pay off. Senior co-captain Barry Dyment was the best runner for Bedford, in seven out of nine meets, he was the first Buccaneer runner across the finishing line. He set a new course record at Newton-South and was named to the Dual County League and Lowell Sun All Star Team. Dyment along with co-captain Matt Kennedy, Doug Blair, and Mike Callender were all medalists at the State Coaches Invitational Meet. The three meets the harriers lost were all close. Bedford lost only by one point to Acton and by five points to Wayland. Next year the D.C.L. is going to be very strong, the quest for the title will most likely go down to the last meet. In order for the squad to continue the fine tradition of cross country at Bedford High, the runners will have to train very hard.

This year's team was made up of 4 seniors, 3 juniors, and 4 sophomores. The team had graduated 4 seniors in 1983, and Coach Bill Keup was faced with a rebuilding year. The squad faced many teams outside of the Dual County League due to several teams not fielding full girls' teams. New teams that were faced this year included Hudson Catholic and Chelmsford.

Highlights of the year were the outstanding running by junior Stephanie Timmons, a first year runner who was the medalist in the State Coaches Meet in Boston, as well as the Dual County All-League Meet. Susan Melville, a sophomore, also walked away with a trophy for her outstanding finish. Co-captain Chris Lawrence was picked an All Star runner on the Dual County team.

The team will graduate four runners this year, Tri Captains Chris Lawrence, Adrienne Elder, and Karin Yeatts, as well as Tina Doyle.

The seven returning runners will give coach Keup some seasoned performers in 1984 as the team looks forward to a successful season.

Besides having a great time, the girls' swim team had an outstanding season with a record of 10-2. Swim Team is one sport that is not usually patronized by students or other fans, so we learned to stick together and cheer each other on. Cheering was a big part of our team and learning various cheers is a necessary requirement for a swimmer on our team. The underclassmen this year were a dominant part of the team and without the help of everyone's support and enthusiasm our team would have never been this successful. The most excitement was the meets when we were losing by a few points and in the very last relay, the very last lap, and the very last second we won the meet. The team was helped along with captains Leslie McLaughlin, Karen Zolnay and Maryellen Carter. The excitement lasted through Conference Championships, North Sectional championships and finally State Championships.

1. Lauren Heggstad slips in the water with perfect grace.
2. Leslie and Laura: Never trust those smiles: They're probably up to something!
3. That's not a very serious face for a strenuous finish.

Making a Splash

The Bedford High School Regional Athletic Boy's Swimming Team. Bedford fielded (or pooled) a small swim team this season, which proved to be a problem for them throughout their busy schedule. Sandy Maczo used the talent she did possess, and all the members of the squad to make dual meets quality competition. Captains Greg Moll and Al Kenney led the Aqua-Bucs in points by dominating their respective races. This year the Aqua-Bucs endured both the devastatingly tough opponents such as Weston, Lexington, Acton-Boxborough, as well as the cold Shaw-shen Tech pool water. Another major bright spot the team possessed was the acrobatic, flying circus of Jeff Eagles, from the diving team, under the coach of Cathy Cuthbert. Jeff continuously led the D.C.L. in diving throughout the 1983-84 season.

Although the 1984 Varsity Boys' Basketball team did not win all their games, the players performed with excellent skill for their audiences. There was always a number of fans to see the team play and the cheerleaders were always there to give spirit to the crowd. Captains Adam Stewart and Chris Kimmins led the team into many well played games and were always there to support the team. T.J. Cardoza was the only player who made the DCL All Star team and he worked hard to make it that far. Overall, the team had a tough season with victories and defeats but the seniors Adam Stuart, Chris Kimmins, Dwight McDaniels, T.J. Cardoza, Peter Pray, and Phil Kohm paved the way for next years team.

Shooting For Victory

The 1984 Varsity Girls Basketball team, coached by Mr. Patuleia, had a good season which demonstrated the great amount of effort that was put into the season. The captains Tricia Burns and Elaine Carroll were excellent leaders and assisted in all the games with their useful plays. Manager Doug Burr helped the coach tremendously. Without him, the team would not have been as organized and the paperwork would have never been done. The graduating seniors Kathy Alessi, Meg Isnor, Tricia Burns, Maureen Bench, Amy McGovern and Elaine Carroll dominated the games and demonstrated outstanding sportsmanship. Kerry McGovern was the only player to play in the DCL All Star game, her fancy footwork revealing her excellent form of playing. Overall, the girls had a good season with a lot of fun and spirit.

At the time of this writing, the Bedford High School hockey team is in the midst of a playoff race with Dual County League rivals Boston Latin and Concord-Carlisle. In order for Bedford to have gotten into the playoffs they must have won two of their three remaining games. After being whipped by Shawsheen Tech 8-4 on opening night, they turned around and did not lose 9 out of 11 games. Bedford's offensive production has come from their first line of Jimmy O'Shaughnessy, Chris Birch, and Jim Storer, scoring 44 of Bedford's 67 goals. Their defense has been led by senior co-captain Sean McCaffery and their net has been minded by senior co-captain Ken Ginder, who has an outstanding 2.50 goals against average. This years team has accomplished a feat that no other Bedford team has done in thirteen years, beat Acton-Boxborough! Bedford accomplished this on December 29, 1983, beating the Colonials 4-1. This season has been one of the best for Bedford High School Hockey.

Showing Superior Style . . .

The Winter Track team's record this season was three wins and four losses. The senior runners who led the races were co-captain Matt Kennedy and co-captain Barry Dymant. Senior shotputters Peter Farrell and Carl Cas-tetter usually came in first or second, and Dan Coloa placed in the high jump and the hurdles. Junior Sean "the adjuster" Hurley remained undefeated in the 1000 for the dual meets. He also broke the school record in the 1000 at the Coaches Invitational with a time of 2; 23.3. Doug Blair followed Dymant in the 2 mile, his best time being a 10:31. Lonnie Murray led the 600 with his best time of 1:21. Also, Keith Dougherty, despite a bad crash after clearing 5 feet in the high jump, recovered and placed for Bedford in the hurdles. Neil Amidon, a sophomore, ran the 300 and placed first 6 out of the 7 times that he ran it, his best time being a 34.6. Freshman Philip "the pacer" Lawrence should be mentioned for his unpredictable, but commendable running in the 1000. Finally, the relay runners, who sometimes had the outcome of the meet depend on their race, were Neil Amidon, Matt Kennedy, Lonnie Murray, and Sean Hurley.

An Uphill Season

This year the ski team had more potential in its skiers than ever before. The boys had three strong returning skiers in senior Rich Aldridge and junior co-captain Barry Yaceshyn and Don Bunker. The girls had three excellent returnees, as well as picking up two new outstanding skiers. Three-time Duel County All-Star Kim Merrick led the way along with fellow co-captain Tina Collyer, senior Karin Yeatts, freshman Robin Folweiler, and the Swede, Malin Hennikson.

The ski team is split into two different teams: the cross country ski team and the downhill ski team. The downhill team could just as well be called the cross country-downhill combined team because in order to letter all downhill racers had to participate in the cross country meets. The coaches, Mike Sorgi and Helen Folweiler, installed this rule because last year Bedford could not fill the required ten spots needed to field a team. Apparently the plan worked. For the first time in many, many years, the cross country team did not inhibit "the basement." The boys were led by Doug Elder, who improved his time every race and was the top racer for Bedford throughout the season except for one strong performance by Yaceshyn. The girls were led by Robin Folweiler. She replaced her sister as the girls top cross country skier and finished in the top 15 in all four races. Other standouts included Matt Vosika, Kris Routt, Aldridge, and Mark Alcaide for the guys and Yeatts, Malin Hennikson, Merrick, Collyer, and Kathy Ellis for the gals.

The downhill team had a rough year. Although they never finished in last place in any of the races, they never finished in the top three either. Disqualifications riddled every meet and skis refused to stay attached to boots. Yaceshyn and Merrick continued to shine as the consistently placed in the top ten in their respective races. Bunker and Aldridge alternated as the boys runner-up while Hennikson raced shot-gun for the girls. The team was rounded-out by Gene Holmstead, Eric Niblack, Routt, Alcaide, Matt Wright, Robert Haugh, Folweiler, Collyer, Ellis, Yeatts, Heike Lucknerath, Liz Colbath, and Bill Pugh, all of whom excelled in their own right.

At the end of the season the final Skimeister standings came out. The rankings are for those skiers whose combined points in both the downhill and cross country meets labeled them among the tops of their sports. The boys had two in the top ten as Yaceshyn and Aldridge proved to be as strong as was expected. Three others managed to place in the top 20. Pugh, Routt, and Holmsted. Overall it was one of the best seasons for the boys in years. The girls did even better. Merrick finished an outstanding third and Folweiler placed a strong seventh. Collyer, Hennikson, Lucknerath, Ellis, and Yeatts supported the rest in leading the girls to their best season ever. (There are 125 skiers in each division, boys & girls.)

Despite the five, sometimes eight, hour practices and the endless hours of lonely cross country training, the team did quite well and had many memorable times, most of them on the 40-minute bus trips to and from Mt. Wachusett. The team concluded their ski season with the annual team "banquet" and awards ceremony. (For a list of all the team members see adjacent photos and captions.)

Jumping for Joy

Gymnastics — the science dealing with people doing flips, turns and somersaults and other contortions the body was not created to do. Gymnasts — people involved in the science of gymnastics. BHS Gymnist — people striving to be perfect gymnasts. That was the goal of the team this year. They came close to it; they broke the school record for the total number of points awarded in a meet. Captained by Mary Ellen Carter the team produced strong individuals but lacked overall depth. The most dominant figure was junior Brenda Sayles. The points she received from her strong performances on the vault, beam and floor exercises added significantly to the team's overall total. Other all-around contributors were Mary Ellen Carter, Jeanette Monroe, Veronica Welch and Renata Pomponi. Susan Hawkins and Carol McClatchey excelled on the beam while Christine Martell mastered the vault. Good routines were sometimes executed by the rest of the team. Highlighting the season were first home meets against Wayland and Weston. Also important were managers Laura and Sheila Feltman as well as coach Holzlerbein. The team's attitude was good despite the late practices. Fun was had against the sweat and pain.

The rifle team had a good season backed by coach Fichera. The team was led by senior Jim Doherty. Strongest efforts were made by team members Eric Carsen and Sean Dámery and others as they shot their way to success. Great performances were given by the female members of the team Beth Thorenson and Ann Marie Stella. The team had a shootin' good season, holding their home meets downstairs at the BHS riflerrange. Although the rifle team does not draw many fans the attitude and spirit of the team members as well as the coach made every meet they had fun and exciting. Riflery involves a great deal of concentration and aim which the team seemed to have a lot of. This kind of skill and attitude will set a pattern for future members of the rifle team. The spirit of the team was high as they aimed toward a winning season.

STUDENT LIFE

The BHS Music Dept. presents Meredith Willson's THE MUSICMAN March 17, 18, 19, 1983

"You ought to give Iowa a try." So said the townspeople of River City as they welcomed to their mid-western community, the setting of Bedford High School's 1983 musical comedy, The Music Man. This quiet, ordinary town is suddenly awakened by the arrival of a traveling salesman and con-artist who schemes his way into the rural spotlight. In convincing the citizens that the presence of a pool hall will corrupt the youth of River City, the vibrant, captivating Harold Hill, played by senior John Epeneter, assures the parents that the formation of a boys' band will keep the children from straying into a life of immorality. He generously offers to sell both instruments and uniforms in addition to teaching the children how to play. In the show-stopping number "Seventy-six Trombones" Hill sweeps the community into a fantasy of parades and grandeur. Completely mesmerized by Hill's sparkling personality, none of the townspeople ever suspect or question his credentials. None, that is, except the town librarian, Marian Paroo, portrayed by senior Carol Richardson. The victim of vicious rumors, she is a social outcast in River City until she becomes the object of Hill's affection. Because she is idealistic in her views of men, however, she resists his advances, presenting Hill with a challenge for his powers of persuasion. Although the community is easily captivated by Hill's charms, it is not until the end of the show that he is able to convince Marian, and himself, that he is in love.

Meanwhile, to keep the parents from discovering that their children are not receiving any musical training, Hill develops what he calls "The Think System" whereby the children think about what they are supposed to play instead of actually playing it. He also keeps the citizens active in an effort to culturalize the town. First, he organizes the four ever-quarreling school committee members, played by Benji

Mendes, Jack Monaco, Russell Cobe, and Scott Campbell, into a barbershop quartet. In the spectacular number "The Shipooop!", Hill and his friend, Marcellus, played by John Orlando, teach the teenagers of River City a new dance step. As the upstanding women of the community who also fall prey to the charms of "Professor" Hill, Rosanne McHugh, Sue Ayasse, Katie Brian, Mary Guirleo, and Sarah Robinson delighted the audience with their zany attempts to establish a modern dance troupe. In one extremely hilarious and memorable scene, the ladies "gracefully" pretend to be Grecian Urns.

For a time, all is well in River City: the school committee members walk around singing, the children have their instruments and new dances, the ladies clumsily flutter about in attempted sophistication, and Hill does a booming business. However, the illusion is shattered when another salesman comes to town and exposes Hill as a fraud. The townspeople become enraged and in a wild frenzy scour the audience, searching for Hill in order to tar-and-feather him. In the meantime, unaware of the sudden change of events, Harold and Marian realize they are in love, and sing "Till There Was You." Moments after they have declared their love for one another, however, Hill is seized by the angry townfolk. It is only because of Marian's rational view of the dramatic and positive changes brought about by Professor Hill that allows him to be accepted by the community once again.

Supporting roles were played by Kris Cowan as Mrs. Paroo, Rick Dacey as Mayor Shinn, Carolyn Killum as the Mayor's daughter, Steve McDonough as Charlie Cowell, Tibor Nagy as Tommy Gilas, Wendy Utey as Amaryllis, and Donald Woodford as Winthrop Paroo.

) Someday my prince will come! (Carol Richardson) ) "Can I stop smiling now?" (Sue Ayasse, Mary Giureo)

Choir and Ensembles

Ensemble: First Row: Katrina Pullen, Stephanie Hirsch, Wendy Coerbs, Meg Gurley, Shelly Reed, Christine Martell, Lisa Leong. Second Row: Sandy McDonald, Jennifer Wise, Chris Mont, Patricia Olsen, Jill Costello, Laurie Felt, Joni Montemagno. Third Row: Sheryl Orris, Nancy Damery, Leslie Carroll, Julie Mann, Elizabeth Colbath, Caren Manning. Fourth Row: Kathy Sutton, Tricia Conway, Pam Dutra, Jennifer Kimmins.

Membership to the Ensembles singing group is open to the entire school for any students who wish to perform vocally. Every other day during periods F and D, these singers meet to rehearse music for the Christmas and the Spring concerts. Some of the numbers the ensembles performed with the combined Choir and Madrigal included 'Twas the Night Before Christmas and the traditional hallelujah (from the Messiah). Under the direction of Mr. Keith Phinney, the members of the ensembles enjoy their participation in the BHS Music Department and often join other groups as they progress through high school. The fifty member choir, the largest of Bedford High School's select singing groups, performs in the POMs Concert, the Christmas concert, and the Spring Concert each year. In addition, the choir makes up the majority of the cast for the annual musical comedy. After the fire which destroyed their robes last year, this year's choir donned stunning new robes with white Heidleburg sleeves and BHS-monogrammed pennant collars. Because of the groups impressive size as well as the vocal talent involved, the BHS choir always gives an outstanding performance.

- 1) Mr. Phinney conducts.
- 2) Sarah Robinson accompanying the choir.

Bedford High School has always prided itself in the outstanding quality of its most select vocal groups, the Madrigal, the Double Sextette, and the Barbershop Quartet. First, within the curriculum is the eighteen member Madrigal which meets every other day of the school year. These students chosen following an audition with Mr. Phimmey, perform at concerts and also have the option of participating in the annual musical comedy. Because of the small number of members and their outstanding vocal abilities, this group performs a wider variety of musical styles. Although a madrigal piece is usually part of the program, the Madrigal also performs songs of several other time periods, giving it exciting and challenging versatility.

Secondly, the Double Sextette is a select group of sixteen female vocalists. (The size of the group has grown since it was originally named!) Like the Madrigal members, the girls in the Double Sextette must audition before becoming members. Under the direction of junior Sarah Robinson they rehearse every Monday and Thursday after school in preparation for the many annual concerts. In addition, the Double Sextette sings for various groups and organizations in the surrounding area.

Thunderous applause and cheers of delight always herald the appearance of the Barbershop Quartet, the third of BHS's select vocal groups. The four members who rehearse after school with the assistance of Andrea Lund on keyboard perform such perennial favorites as "Sweet Adeline" and "Give my Regards to Broadway". With their easy-going style and melodramatic humor, it is no wonder that the quartet members capture the heart of their audience. Besides concert appearances, the quartet also accompanies the Double Sextette in area performances during the holiday season.

Marching Band

The 1983-84 BHS Superband was truly super. Consisting of the wind ensemble and several members of concert band, this group of spirited, talented musicians charmed and delighted football fans throughout the season. The band practices — rain or shine — every Friday Afternoon from 2:30 'till 5 or 6 o'clock blocking out pre-game and half time shows and polishing the precision of the often difficult routines. Unlike some other more regimented marching bands, our superband emphasizes variety of music (new tunes every week), different routines, but most importantly fun! In addition to the precision of practiced marching, the band also enjoyed casual routines such as the one which featured tubas as a winking eye on a smiling musical face. Some of the more popular selections this season include "Maneater", "Zoro", "Energy", and "Land of a Thousand Dances". The band could not have given director William Toland a more spectacular BHS send-off.

Bedford's High-Steppers

The Majorette Squad was the biggest ever in BHS history this year with eleven majorettes. Seven majorettes were underclassmen participating for the first time; the other four were seniors who have been together on the squad for four years. This season the squad twirled, danced, and used streamers in original routines to many different types of music such as the theme from "Zorro", "Saints in Concerts", "Land of 1000 Dances" (by J. Geils), and "Maneater" (Hall & Oates). The squad itself had lots of fun together this year from Friday afternoon munching to Peppermint Patties and hotdogs on Saturday mornings, to night bonfires. We would like to thank Mr. Toland for all his help and support over the last four years and the best of luck to him in his last year at BHS.

5) "Aren't you glad you use Dial?" (Ann Marie Stella)

All That Jazz!

Of all the BHS instrumental groups, one of the most favorite and exciting is the Jazz Ensemble, a group of approximately thirty students who play trumpet, saxophone, tuba, trombone, guitar, bass, and percussion. Following the conclusion of football season, the group rehearses every Friday afternoon in preparation for the Spring Concert, the Winter concert and the Concert on the Green. Some of the wide variety of music they perform includes blues, jazz, contemporary, and big band. However, one of the most memorable aspects of the Jazz Ensembles performances is the frequency of solo segments. For both musician and audience it is a thrill for a player to stand up and "strutt his stuff".

- 1) Mr. Toland listens with a critical ear.
- 2) Raj jazes it up.
- 3) First Row: John Orlando, Raj Sundra, Sheila Feltman, Peter Galipeau, Molly Koester. Second Row: Laura Feltman, Donald Woodford, Al Kenney, Wendy Utlev, James Dupree, John Grimm, Lynn Telford. - 4) Battle of the saxes(John Orlando, Raj Sundra)
- 5) Andrea Lund concentrates on her notes.
- 6) Strummin' along.
- 7) Lynne "Trombone" Telford

Blowin' in the Wind

Close to fifty musicians make up the BHS Wind Ensemble, one of the most selective instrumental groups in the school. Wind meets every day period E and practices music of a variety of styles from popular to classical. In addition to performing as the Wind Ensemble, these musicians also make up the Orchestra, the Pit-orchestra for the annual musical, the Jazz Ensemble and the Marching Band. The Wind Ensemble performs at both the Winter and Spring concerts as well as the concert on the green.

- 1) Jay Schoendorf, Russ Cobe, Scott Sevier concentrate on their horns.
- 2) "Is it an octopus or is it a contra-bass clarinet?" (Andrea Lund)
- 3) Wendy Utley plays her shirt.
- 4) Wind Ensemble: First Row (left to right) Renata Pomponi, Karen Zolnay, Peter Galipeau, Andrea Lund, Nancy Woodford, Judy Boyle, Barbara Grimm, Sarah Robinson. Second Row: Molly Koester, Raj Sundra, Brenda McMahon, Amy McGovern, Sheila Feltman, John Orlando, Jack Monaco, Christiane Castro. Third Row: Linda Blair, Carol McClatchey, JoAnne McDonough, Mandy Telford, Jay Schoendorf, Russ Cobe, Scott Sevier, Mike Kenney, Lynne Telford, Bruce Kozuma. Fourth Row: Mark Vade bon coeur, David Gage, Laura Feltman, Peter Corea, Donald Woodford. Al Kenney, Jim Dupree, John Grimm, Wendy Utley.
- 5) "Where's the bubbles Lawrence Welk?" (Mr. Toland)
- 6) "Pucker up, Peter." (Peter Galipeau)
- 7) Sarah Robinson concentrating in Wind.

First Row (left to right): Donna Stefanidakis, Christine Sword, Daniel Silverstone, Christopher Smith, Michelle Gonzales, Linda Ricci, Carolyn Matthews. Second Row: James Jacewicz, Kathy Ellis, Scott Udell, Christine McGovern, Denise Schafer, Debbie O'Neil, Joanne Melville, Jan Hamann, Joanne Delaney. Third Row: John Callender, Lucy McGovern, John McCune, Adam Erlich, Laura Lea Lanier, Eric Anderson, Susan McMahan, Jo Beth Lanier, Julie Kostishack, David Burr, Anne Solamita, Pam Wingood. Fourth Row: Janis McCarthy, Gary Kleiman, Robbie Roberson, Kevin Mickel, Douglas Burr, Ken Ginder, Suzanne Melville, Ken Brown, Susan Sabetty, Malene Shannon, Janet Drohan, Christina Hopkins, Susan Reily, Meg Gurley. Fifth Row: Hanna Bragg, Ginger Miller, David Kupfrian, Shan Pitts, Robert Huffman, Julie Kurkin, Ann Whiting, Judy Ciampa, Peter Galipeau, John Orlando, Bruce Kozuma, Terry Poole, Linda Pysczynski, Michelle Stuart, Debbie Sharkey.

The largest of Bedford High School's instrumental groups is the Concert Band which meets every other day during the year. The nearly sixty musicians learn and perform a wide variety of music during the winter and spring concerts as well as the Concert on the Green. In addition, Concert Band members have the option of joining the marching band during the football season. Whether on the field or on the stage, this group always gives an exciting performance.

- 1) Linda Ricci plays her clarinet.
- 2) See under picture
- 3) Shan Pitts and Bob Huffman on percussion.
- 4) Sue Reilly and Christina Hopkins on flute.
- 5) Janet Drohan flashes a happy smile.
- 6) Ginger Miller waits for her cue.

Strumming Along

The BHS Orchestra is a group of approximately forty students who meet every other day during the school year, and whether performing alone or on stage or accompanying vocalists, this group consistently performs well. Besides their performance in the annual Spring Concert, one of the highlights for the orchestra members is the Christmas Concert in which they play selections from the Messiah and other well known pieces. For example, this year's concert featured a favorite selection from the "Nutcracker Suite". The hard work involved as well as the enjoyment found in performing are clearly illustrated by the excellence of the orchestra's performance.

- 1) My Hagar conducts the orchestra.
- 2) Bruce Kozuma plays the French horn.
- 3) Peter Corea seriously approaches his music.
- 4) Andrea Lund contributes her talent.

THE FIRST BLACK MISS AMERICA

Telemedia

"Live from Telemedia Broadcasting, this is Starting Point with your hosts Ginger Miller, Richard Aldridge, Barbara Pexider and sports commentator Michael Sullivan." Every morning Telemedia puts out the show that gives the latest BHS happenings, interviews with various students from BHS clubs and activities, the days weather and sporting events. Two Fridays a month "Ask the Principal" is aired, hosted by Laura Kupfrian. Mr. Duggan, BHS principal, is asked to comment on various subjects pertaining to problems and happenings within the school, hence the show's name. One Friday a month "Forum" is shown. A different guest speaker is invited for each new show, and students form a studio audience, posing various questions pertaining to the speaker's knowledge.

Telemedia is staffed by students on an entirely volunteer basis and are trained technicians, talent, directors or producers in charge of putting out all of Telemedia productions. Led by producer Timmy Glatfelter, directors David DiNisco and Laura Feltman, associate producers Jack Monaco, Ginger Miller, and Barbara Grimm, and production manager Judy Boyle, Telemedia's thirty members are responsible for running our school's information network. These diehards dedicate their mornings and afternoons getting everything together.

5) Cindy Edwards and Karin Yeatts, selling popcorn and cider at a Bucs football game.

Most people hear about AFS (American Field Service) through peer recommendations: "Come on — we won't have to go to class and we'll get out of today's test!" Others get involved through recruitment: "You are going to help me sell popcorn at the football game on Saturday!" However, once they start going to meetings, the club grows on them. They discover such activities as the Halloween party, the exchange weekend party, the rollerskating escapade, and the Easter daffodil sale.

But besides these activities, they come into contact with the most important part of AFS — the AFS student. This year our student is Ana Claudia Florencio from Brazil. She is a fantastic, dynamic person, taking the ups and downs of living in a foreign country all in stride. When asked what she expected of the U.S. before she came here, she replied, "I heard they eat a lot of hamburgers and sandwiches here." Ana really enjoyed her stay here, though she often missed her parents, which was to be expected. Her presence definitely added to the senior class.

As to the activities, the first thing of the year was the usual popcorn popping on Fridays. Every home football game, despite the cold and rain, the AFS table (with the low-cal, tasteless popcorn) was always there. The next event was the dance held around Homecoming — Halloween. The party took place at the "awesome" estate of Julia McConnell. As one drove down her mile-long driveway, a certain scene from "Halloween" entered one's mind. There were fears of someone lurking in the bushes ready to jump out and attack the carloads of party-goers. The dummy hanging from the branch didn't help matters much! Such persons as Eddie Grant, Ms. Colgate, Geraldine, Madame Butterfly, and Ms. Snowcone were present. Before everyone could recover from staying up until 5 A.M. that night, the exchange weekend was here and the McConnell living room became Studio 64 for the Worm, the Bump, and the Jitterbug. That day had been the rollerskating sortie, so some people were too tired and sore to dance! As usual, the March orange and grapefruit sale and the Easter daffodil sale finished out the year.

Next year, the club hopes to grow bigger and more exciting as leadership will pass from graduating seniors Barbara Konkle, Julia McConnell, Karin Yeatts, and Rich Aldridge to worthy underclassmen. The club aspires to receive a student as delightful as Ana was this past year.

Outstanding Achievers

The Bedford High School chapter of the National Honor Society is one of over 20,000 local affiliates. This spring the chapter will hold its twenty-eighth annual induction ceremony.

In past years students with a cumulative average of 88 through the third term of the junior year have been eligible for admission to the society. This year, however, with the implementation of the "quality points" system, a new method for determining eligibility is under consideration. In addition to outstanding Scholarship, students admitted to the society must have displayed the qualities of Leadership, Service and Character, in the judgement of a faculty committee representative of all departments in the school.

Among the activities of the Bedford NHS is fund raising to supply the Christian Children's Fund with help in the support of a Taiwanese orphan and to offer scholarship assistance to BHS students. Society members also assist at such activities as the orientation of incoming ninth-grade students, career day, and the scholarship dinner. Members are also available for tutorial assistance. In addition, this year, for the first time, the society will conduct a phon-a-thon to raise funds in town for the American Heart Association.

Important future goals for the society are to expand public service activities and to move induction ceremonies to the fall so that eligible students will be able to enter the society earlier than in the past.

- 1) Maureen Bench proudly accepts her NHS membership certificate.
- 2) NHS President Ginger Miller
- 3) Guests enjoy the refreshments at the inductions.
- 4) Mr. Duggan congratulates Sandy Richards on her achievement.
- 5) Dan Colao receives his award.

Signum Staff

My experiences with the 1984 yearbook have been very meaningful. I have learned a lot about myself and about others. Many exceptional people have dedicated themselves to this project and this has made my job so much easier. I would like to thank each of them for devoting their time and for putting up with my incessant demands. In order of their sections the editors were Darnette Holbert, Richard Aldridge, Kerry Latina, Leslie McLaughlin, Janna Johnston, Terri Bellengi, and Jim DeVellis. Darnette took charge of "The People" section and with the help of Janna, Scott Servier, and Louise O'Hara, she compiled this enormous section quickly, efficiently, and, most importantly, without complaints. Thank you, Darnette. You could always be counted on. Richard Aldridge did an outstanding job with his "Academics" section. He was faced with the problem of creating a section that had never been in our book and it turned out remarkably well. Kerry Latina and Leslie McLaughlin were co-editors of the "Sports" section. They worked well together and accomplished the large task of preparing this section. Janna Johnston was in charge of the "Student Life" section. She worked diligently and her section turned out beautifully. Janna, you were always there. Terri Bellengi was the "Advertising" editor. All I can say is, Thanks Terri! You pulled us through several very tough deadlines. Jim DeVellis worked hard with his "Sales" staff to sell the advertising for this book. Right by his side was Mike Powderly, who also put in a lot of time. Ginger Miller took on the enormous task of compiling the written words for this book. Although she called on friends to help her, she did a lot of writing herself. Ginger, that "Harvest" poem is beautiful! I would also like to thank our advisor, Mrs. Housepian. She had enough confidence in me to let me run things the way I thought best. I hope she is satisfied with our work. Also playing an important part in the making of this book was Burlington Studios. Jack Kelly and his photographers did a lot of last minute work for us and we would like them to know that it was greatly appreciated! There were many people who helped out whenever they could ... these people were also very important! They helped us out when we had piles of work and we are very grateful. One last thank-you ... to our publisher's representative, Arnie Lohmann. You came in many times to help us and to generate fresh ideas. It would not have been possible without you Arnie! All of these people were fundamental in producing this book, which I hope everyone will enjoy.

Love,

Tournament Of Plays

The Tournament of Plays is the Drama Club's annual competition between the Freshman, Sophomore, Junior, and Senior classes. Each class presents a forty minute, one act play shown to a panel of judges. This year's Tournament was held November 17, 18, and 19, 1983, where the senior presentation, "The Children's Story" received four awards including "Best Play", "Best Actor" — Peter Galipeau, "Best Actress" — Ginger Miller, and "Best Supporting Actor" — Jack Monaco. Winners of the other awards were "Best Supporting Actress" — Sarah Robinson, "Best Newcomer" — Peter Correa, and the "Student Director" award went to Donald Woodford.

This year's Freshman entry was "A Danish Soap", which dealt with the spirit of William Shakespeare returning to a 20th century earth to modernize his novel Hamlet into a soap opera version. The cast included: Lynda Blair, Peter Correa, Julie Mann, Nancy Woodford, Matthew Huffman, William Larkin, Christine Dupont, Linda Ricci, Jill Costello, James Larkin, Audrey Graves, and Christopher Marcotte.

The Sophomore presentation was "No One Wants to Know", a comedy about a woman dying from a terminal illness. This cast included: Ulie Reinisch, Renata Pomponi, Shiela Feltman, Dane Graves, Mike Rosenberg, Delly Pease, Veronica Welch, and Kim Travers.

The Junior Class produced "An Overpraised Season," which showed three teenagers and the problems they faced while growing up in high school. The actors and actresses included were: Sarah Robinson, Russell Cobe, Andrea Lund, John Grimm, Mike Sullivan, and Julie Kostishack.

The last and best play of all was performed by the seniors. "The Children's Story" was a drama about the aftermath of a cold war and the attempt of the new teacher to teach the children the "right thoughts." The award-winning cast was: Ginger Miller, Laura Feltman, Peter Galipeau, Laura Kupfrian, Gayle Alperin, John Orlando, Judy Boyle, Richard Aldridge, Jack Monaco, and Carla Hutchinson.

The Few, The Proud ... ROTC!

The Bedford JROTC is not just a class, it is a source of a multitude of activities in which the student cadet can participate. Bedford Cadets can take part in activities such as Drill Team, Color Guard, JROTC dances, writing for the JROTC newspaper, and going on field trips.

The drill team is made up of approximately twelve cadets who practice three days a week. The team participates in four competition matches a year with the championships in March.

The Color Guard escorts the Bedford Marching Band in football games and leads the National Anthem. The Color Guard also marches with the band during parades.

Members of JROTC are also given an opportunity to go on annual field trips to McGuire Air Force Base and Fort Dix. A summer field trip to Paris, France is made every two years to attend the Paris Air Show. This exposition is a demonstration of all the world's greatest aircraft. The other activities held throughout the year are numerous and open to all cadets who wish to participate.

1) Chris Dunbar, Matt Urquhart, Colleen Harrington, Stephanie Mierzykowski, Mike Vosika, John Guetersloh pose ready to travel.

2) Peter Castro, Doug Burr, Terry Bradshaw, Jay Guetersloh, John Crane, Shaunn Feazel. Mike Vosika comprise the Color Guard.

3) ROTC... ready for action on the football field

4) A couple enjoys the ROTC dance.

5) ROTC Color Guard in the Bedford Day parade.

Winter Wonderland

Why would anyone be at the high school at 8:30 A.M. on a Saturday morning? Simple, the day was January 28th and the senior class was hosting a Winter Carnival to help ease the tension of mid-term exams. The day started with snow sculpturing where students created a huge B.H.S. in the snow. They even sprayed the edges with black spray paint to add definition to the letters. Hay rides were next on the agenda, and after grabbing a quick bite to eat many people played king of the mountain, and tug-of war on the football field. Also, there were sled races and snowball fights. All who attended the activities enjoyed themselves, even though they were a bit frozen by the end of the day.

Up in Smoke

Bedford High, as well as the rest of the town, had its first bonfire in twenty-five years. The Buccaneer back stop was the ideal place in which to "host our roast." The great mountain of wood was doused with gasoline and the bonfire began as the football team captains torched it to life. The soaring flames crackled atop the lumber as the smoke encircled the crowd surrounding the blaze. As the band played and the majorettes and cheerleaders danced the hundreds of supporting, rowdy fans cheered enthusiastically with the hope that our football team would lead us on to victory the following Thanksgiving morning. As the crowd slowly dispersed, the Patriot who was cleverly positioned at the apex of the blaze suddenly became engulfed with flames. Less than three minutes had gone by before the burning symbol of the following morning's victory was undoubtedly burnt to a crisp. Much fun was had by all and hopefully we will be able to continue this event annually.

- 1) Lynn shows off the cheerleaders' work.
- 2) The bonfire the night before the Thanksgiving game.
- 3) Majorettes get psyched for the game the following day.
- 4) Band members Molly Koester, Raj Sundra, Jay Schoendorf, Mandy Telford brave the cold to play at the bonfire.

Dance And Romance

The Junior-Senior Semi-Formal was held on December 23, 1983, at the American Legion. Over seventy-five couples attended and from the looks of things, a good time was had by all.

It was strange to see the boys you see in Levi's everyday in suits and ties. The girls also looked very nice in their dresses.

Needless to say, the dance floor was extremely crowded at all times as couples danced the night away.

The chaperones were Ms. Blackwell, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Downing and the senior class advisor Mr. Pateulia, who stunned us all with his John Travolta talents. The night was not long enough as everyone would agree; 11:30 came too early and before you knew it, the semi-formal was over. Hopefully, the tradition will continue and there will be many more to come!!!

- 1) "It's my turn to lead!" (Chris Lawrence, Lonnie Murray)
- 2) Tina Collier and Chris Kimmins on the dance floor
- 3) "Hey, watch the flowers" (Jimmy Gettman, Tracy Tanner)
- 4) Get down on it! (Jeff Mazzeo, Kristen Dougherty)
- 5) Ginger Miller and Lou Brown enjoying themselves on the sidelines
- 6) "It's a totally different head man, totally" (Keith Dougherty)

Powder Puff Power

Powder Puff was revived in a grueling match that ended in victory for the senior girls. Quarterbacking the graduating squad, Sandy Richards passed the ball to Maureen Bench successfully for two touchdowns. Although beauty was in abundance on the field, the beasts seemed to be more dominating.

- 1) Sandy Richards, Carole Cnttenden prepare to "kill."
- 2) Who's blocking whom? (Linda Thompson, Tina Collyer, John Bellino, Amy Birmingham, Kerry Latina, Joyce Hennrikus, Diana Birmingham)
- 3) Lynn Breland rushes for a first down
- 4) "Let's get physical!" (Joyce Hennrikus)
- 5) "GO!!!" (Tricia Burns, Andrea Cantella)
- 6) Linda Thompson trucks toward Darnette Holbert.

And They Call This Food?

Although cafeteria meals are often maligned by harsh student criticism, we all must admit each entree served by the two dining halls possess a wide variety of palatable, nutritional, and fulfilling features. Whether the student chooses the daily luncheon special, or is just satisfying a case of the munchies, he or she is assured of quality food and facility cleanliness from the ever-dedicated "caf staff." Thank you, ladies of the lunchroom, and men of the mops for making so great the only good class all day.

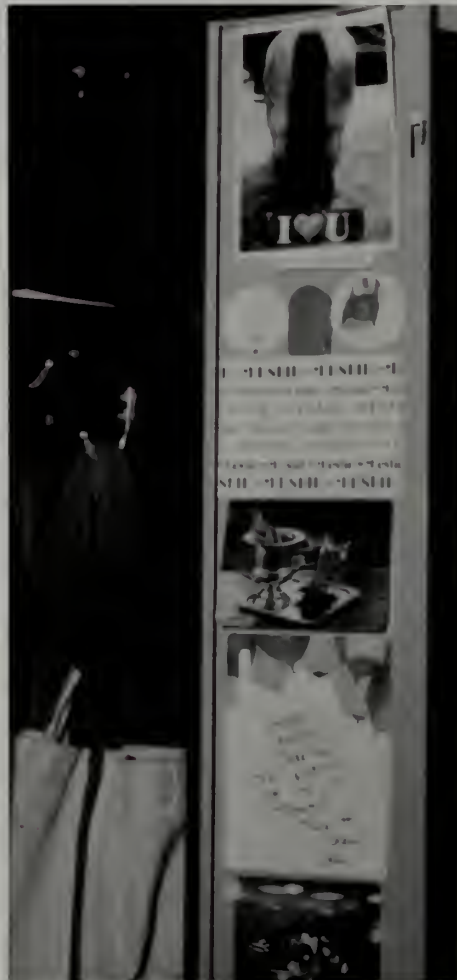

- 1) Lynn Breland ponders over what to buy for lunch, while Mr. Judge makes his selection
- 2) Real men drink Hi-C! Dan Lynch, Chris Kimmins, Adam Stuart, Mark Venuti, Phil Kohn, Robert Lord, and Jeff Mazzeo at lunch.
- 3) Rich Aldridge and Gavle Alpen select some fresh fruit for lunch.
- 4) Mike Hill brown bags it.
- 5) Part of the wide variety of food offered by the cafeteria staff.
- 6) Waiting in line for the rations.
- 7) Malin Henrikson, Darnette Holbert, and Janet Drohan eat lunch.
- 8) Gwenn Cardoos, Lisa Hayward, Ann-Marie Stella, and Shan Pitts enjoy some homemade birthday cake.
- 9) Chris Russo, Jill Millman, Andrea Cantella, Carole Crittenden, Barbara Pexider, and Jean-Marie Matthews dine together.
- 10) Sean McCaffery helps to keep the cafeteria clean by returning his dirty tray to Mr. Swanson.
- 11) Jim DeVellis and Brian Coguen enjoying their lunch.

If Lockers Could Talk

Students make it a tradition to spice up the days at BHS by decorating their lockers with various items. A person's locker reflects his personality, and if you saw any of the girls' lockers, you would think they were all boy crazy. Most things that girls hang in their lockers should be censored, but other things are quite decorative. Boys don't participate in the art of locker decorating as much as girls, but they have their share of magazine clippings, funny sayings, and good-looking girls. Just think how boring it would be if you visited someone's locker and all you saw was metal! Decorated lockers brighten up your day in between classes.

CLOSING

The balloon's a teen-ager struggling to get free.

It is restrained by a hand that is trying to guide it.

As the balloon grows, and proves its strength, the hand allows it more freedom.

The balloon is finally set free . . . it strives to reach new horizons.

We are balloons; progressing from stage to stage like lifeless toys to ascending orbs. At birth we are helpless, devoid of the ability of movement. Just as the balloon dangles limp from outstretched fingers, we rest limp in our parents' arms. The balloon begins to fill; we become more independent, expanding with life's very essence. We mature; gaining strength and rigidity along the way. For every balloon of a different size and color there exists people just as varied, each with their own colorful personalities. About the time we enter junior high we, as human beings, begin to round out, stretching our mental skins with knowledge and experience. The strings that are attached to us, our parents, begin to feel the strain of our new-found growth; tugging for weightlessness and independence. By the end of senior year the filling is completed. The strain proves too great and the strings break. The balloon floats off; soaring to unaccustomed heights and new horizons.
